

To the family of Eric Herzburg,

First off I would like to say that while I did not know about Eric till this year from what I do know he was a great aspect to this country and to everyone who has heard his story. I love the story were he moved to a new school and wanted to play football. He had never even played before and vowed to give it 110%. He knew it was going to be a struggle and that didn't matter to him, he wanted to work and give it everything he had. I really respect that. He said he had a "calling" when he joined the Marines. I believe his faith made him the person that would say, "I was put on this Earth to strive and make something of myself." He was an unforgettable person, and even with the time he had he made something of himself. His story has certainly touched me, and i'm glad I have gotten to hear his story and know him, not in person, but through words. Thank you for keeping his story alive and for letting his memory live on.
